Health in the Justice System: Shaping future services through research and collaboration

Friday 20th September 2019

09:30-16:30

Rolle Building, University of Plymouth

This collaborative event will bring together the results of our three health justice research projects – Engager, Strengthen and ongoing work with Devon and Cornwall Police, and provide a forum for networking and discussions.

There will be opportunities to discuss future innovations and collaborations and to develop ideas for future work, designing and evaluating new ways of improving health for individuals in contact with the criminal justice system, as well as to reflect on the results.

Our research in this area has only been possible through joint work with teams from the local and regional health, social care and justice sectors. Our invited speakers include:

- Mark Bignell, Hamoaze House, Plymouth
- Gary Wallace, Office of the Director of Public Health, Plymouth City Council
- Mark Bolt, Devon & Cornwall Police
- Jon Nason, HM Prison & Probation Service

This free event will include lunch and refreshments.
